Photography

I have found over the years that the use of digital cameras impinges on the Victorian atmosphere I seek to create. This subtracts from the quality of the visit.

After careful consideration I have found the best thing is to limit photography to two occasions: - Once in the classroom at the end of the first lesson and again outside after the children have eaten their lunch. The latter enables a classic "Victorian" photograph to be taken with Slate and Date.

I do hope all teachers will find that this gives opportunity to take sufficient photographs.

Many Thanks
